

Bayern Munich attacking scheme:

The play starts with the goalkeeper distributing the ball to a central defender.

The defender passes to a midfielder who controls the tempo of the game.

The midfielder then switches play to the wing where a winger advances forward.

The full-back overlaps the winger to create width and passing options.

The winger either crosses the ball into the box or cuts inside.

Meanwhile, the striker positions himself in the penalty area to receive the ball.

If the cross is delivered, the striker attempts to finish the attack with a shot on goal.

If the attack fails, the team quickly reorganizes to regain possession.
